

● Pilot Mr Darren Deroia gives visitors to the Albury Air Show a chance to enjoy a jet flight.

Fancy a flight as a top gun?

By SARAH DEAN

IF the idea of taking a flight in a jet fighter appeals to you this weekend will provide the opportunity to do just that.

Australian Jet Adventures will take joy flights from the Albury airport from today.

The Geelong-based company will take part in the Albury Air Show tomorrow.

It specialises in aerobatic and adventure flights in ex-military jet the BAC 167.

Sales and marketing manager of Australian Jet Adventures Ms Christine Segaert said they provided top gun experiences to people wishing to fulfil their dream of flying in a military jet.

"We are one of only three companies in Australia, and a half a dozen in the world providing real jet fighter flights in military aircraft," Ms Segaert said.

The prices start from $1300 which is for 25 minutes and goes up to $3050 for an hour ride.

Packages include a mission brief, gearing up in fighter pilot suit, helmet, and slim line parachute, digital photos taken of adventure, start-up, checks, return flight, shut down and debrief.

Mrs Segaert said apart from conducting flights during the Airshow tomorrow the company would also conduct flights from the airport today and Monday.

The flights will be conducted from 10am to 4.30pm each day.

Ms Segaert said passengers would have the chance to fly the jets themselves.

"Anyone can fly the jets, you don't have to be a pilot," she said.

Ms Segaert said people could experience air combat manoeuvres such as loop or barrel rolls.

They sit side-by-side with the pilot and view the superb scenery from the BAC 167 Strikemaster.

She said the flights began with a full briefing session to allow passengers to enjoy the experience with confidence.

For more information or to make a booking telephone 0417 142 227.

● More reports, photos Pages 89-92