Imagine yourself soaring the heights in the skies over the South Australian coastline enjoying the view and experiencing the rush of aerial aerobatics, perhaps for the first time.

Now you too can experience the thrill of a flight in a real ex-military aircraft with Australian Jet Adventures.

Know what it feels like to be involved in your own tailor-made sortie in the BAC 167 Strikemaster.

Previously only available to the very few and privileged you can now experience the exhilaration of your very own military style flight right here in your own backyard.

A Victorian owned and operated company Australian Jet Adventures is one of the few places in the world to accommodate this unique style of adventure flying and one of the few to bring this remarkable opportunity to South Australia.

Australian Jet Adventures will be conducting a limited number of flights for the public from Goolwa Airport in January 2003.

As you don your flight suit, slim-line parachute and fighter pilot helmet you will feel like a Top Gun about to embark on a mission.

You will be strapped into position right next to the pilot.

The cabin is pressurised and climate controlled for your comfort and a clear canopy encapsulates you so that your flight is further enhanced as this unique vista passes by.

Thrill to the power of the 5,000 horse power jet engine as it climbs through 10,000 feet in under two minutes at speeds of up to 800 kilometres per hour!

Your flight will start with suiting up in the required equipment and studying the safety aspects of the aircraft.

Great emphasis is placed on the importance of understanding the safety briefing and attention to detail here is vital.

Cockpit familiarisation is also of great importance and interest to the budding Top Gun.

Bookings are essential.
